Six months earlier, Terry had survived open-heart surgery. Now sixty-two, with his sixty-third birthday coming in April, he carried a purpose close to his heart: bring forth Dad's creation and help unite his children.

Joseph Ellis Williams had created Cosmos. Terry had created Seba, the offspring of Cosmos. Their creations would become a bridge for the family.

Terry was six feet tall, bald, muscular, and wore facial hair. Hassan was muscular too, bald with facial hair, and two inches taller. Razi, five feet eight, was their smaller, thin-built brother.
